3. Alice Josephine Harriman, born 04 Aug 1897 in Los Angeles, Los Angeles, California; died 20 Mar 1981 in San Pedro, Los Angeles, California. She was the daughter of 6. Edgar Francis Harriman and 7. Leonora Josephina Oden.

Notes for Elmer Emmitt Parker:

Elmer Emmitt Parker was the fifth child of William A. Parker Jr. and Eva Louisa Landers Parker. Elmer was born in Parker Canyon, which had been settled by his grandfather W.A. Parker Sr. in 1882. Having been born into the ranch country of southern Arizona on April 28, 1895, horses, cows, brush-popping and roping were second nature to the happy go lucky and hard working youngster. Big for his age, he left ranch work at 16 for a muleskinner's job with an Army pack train that carried supplies to remote army camps. In those days, all civilian packers and teamsters were assigned to one troop, Parker reminisced. I was with Troop G of the Fourth Cavalry. "The army was scattered up and down the border for hundreds of miles. The Hadero revolt was under way and the border was a hot spot."

Driving a supply wagon wasn't quite as adventurous or as filled with excitement as some TV or movie scripts would make it seem, but boredom never bothered anyone. Elmer recalls one incident on a short trip of 50 miles across the Arizona trails. "It took us three days. It was the rainy season and as fast as we cleared one mud hole, the team and wagon would sink into another. We made only 12 miles the first day-from 4 a.m. to 10 p.m. We would go clear up to the axle in mud and there wasn't anything to do but unload, pull out load back up and then, about 30 yards down the trail, down we'd go again."

"I remember another time when the rain caused a lot of misery. The troop was bedded down in a canyon when it began to rain. In no time, a wall of water about three feet deep came roaring down the mountain. They lost everything, we were all soaking wet. Their bedding was wet or gone and they were a miserable bunch."

Elmer said he was camped in his wagon and stayed high and dry. The soldiers asked if they could join him and soon about 15 troopers were huddled in the wagon.

In 1913, the family moved to Los Angeles and he went back to cowboying in 1915 on Santa Rosa Island where as many as 9000 head of cattle roamed at one time.

A year later, he returned to Arizona and the Army again, this time as a truck driver on one of the first notarized supply caravans in the army.

Then he began a new career-back in California at Terminal Island-he joined the Los Angeles Fire Department. Firefighting back in those days was an uphill battle and all by hand, Elmer recalls. "All we had were hand reels and 500 feet of hose. We had to drag it with us to every fire. And off the main street, the roads were nothing but sand. The reel would get stuck in the sand nearly every time. It's a good thing we had other reels, all stationed at different points around town."

Cow country called again and Elmer went back to ranching in Arizona, but he returned to San Pedro in 1918 to wed Alice Harriman, whom he had met while a fireman on Terminal Island.

After several years as a shipyard worker, dockhand, tank builder and dairyman, he rejoined the fire department where he spent 31 and a half years, all in the harbor area.

Among the mementoes of his younger days are a number of guns-rifles, one of which was a Winchester 30.06, one of a few made especially for the Texas Rangers. It belonged to his father. Elmer also had other rifles, shotguns and revolvers of all sizes and descriptions and a belt from the bell mare of the last pack train the Army used. He also had kept some old stirrups, wild steer horns, a horse hair lariat and old spurs, and of course, his cowboy boots and a 10-gallon hat.

Elmer and Alice raised two daughters Malvina and Helen. He bought houses and apartments and repaired them. He rented them during the family's many years in San Pedro.

Elmer lived at 230 W. Ninth St. San Pedro California. Elmer died in San Pedro on June 14, 1971.

When They Were Very Young

Alice Parker Reminisces of Childhood on Terminal Island

By MARY BRANDVIG

Terminal Island, soon to be scene of the dedication of a modern achievement, the Vincent Thomas Bridge, once was the scene of an even more romantic event.

The time was 45 years ago. The leading characters in the romance were Alice Harriman and Elmer Parker.

The pretty doll faced girl and her Arizona cowboy husband boarded the ferryboat Real for their elopement across the channel to San Pedro. They climbed the bluff and hurried up the hill to old Mary Star of the Sea Church.

There, Fr. McGrath performed the marriage ceremony in his rectory.

Today, the couple lives a half block from the scene of that elopement. Alice also was confirmed and received her first holy communion in the old church.

Mr. and Mrs. Parker reside now on Ninth St.

Their house is near neighbor to the old Dr. William Guidinger and Lucky Foote homes, and other residences of well-known old-timers.

A descendant of the historic Machado family, related to the Sepulvedas, Alice Parker was the daughter of Josephine Oden Harriman and Edgar F. Harriman.

Mrs. Parker, 66, admits to being an old-timer, but emphatically states "I'm not old."

Her mother, Mrs. Harriman, was daughter of George W. Oden. He came from West Virginia to Wilmington more than a century ago and soon after the arrival here of Phineas T. Banning.

Oden was a carpenter and wheelwright. He soon was making coaches and wagons and teaching his trade to others. Several vehicles he made are known to be still in existence. One is at the L.A. County Museum in Exposition Park and one remains at Banning Manor in Wilmington. George had another distinction. He married sisters. First he married Maria, then Ellen, both widows, who were daughters of Antonio Machado.

Alice's great grandmother was the widow of Dolores Sepulveda, who was killed in a fight with the Indians, as he was returning south from the city of Monterey.

Alice's earliest childhood memory goes back to the first home of her parents, in what was known as East San Pedro. Her mother and father were the third couple to move onto the island, that later became the home of many. They lived near the center of the island's west side, just south of the present ferry terminal.

A few years later, in 1906, they moved nearer to her father's job with the Southern California Lumber Company. The firm later became Blinn, then Fatten Blinn Co. and their home and lumber yard was located across the tracks from the Crescent Wharf.

An only child, surrounded by a quiet world of meadows, tule swans and the waters of San Pedro Bay, Alice had few playmates.

"My best pal was a dog named Snooky." she recalled.

The fun came on weekends, when there was a family gathering. Sometimes the Odens would ride in somebody's wagon out to White Point for a picnic at Uncle Roman Sepulveda's park.

Or a rowboat would be filled with happy relatives for a jaunt to Wilmington. There the grown-ups would dance in the old white warehouse which still stands near the Catalina terminal complex.

Later, as teen-agers, they'd row across or take Duffy's row-boat ferry to San Pedro. They'd dance at "old man Swinford's dance hall on Fifth St." Alice said the hall, built in 1881 by John C. Swinford, is still standing after being moved from its original site.

Little Alice enjoyed several boat trips with her mother including one on a lumber ship to visit San Francisco relatives. "I was sick all the way," she said.

She also traveled on the old Harvard and Yale coastal steamers, visiting along the coast.

Boat watching was an everyday pastime of interest. Alice remembers seeing a few of the last of the sailing ships come in with their cargo.

She walked to the old Terminal Island School with another young islander, Mrs. George (Camille) Conant of Wilmington, the Bartell girls, and others.

Later, when the teen-age population of the island went to high school, they rowed across to Wilmington through "fog, rain, and sunshine." It took the little group more than an hour to hike to the boat, cross the bay, then walk to the old Wilmington High School on Anaheim. Among the gang crossing with them was Wilder Hartley, later to be a city councilman, and her friends, Myrtle and Verna Markey.

Their grammar school still stands on the Island. "It was a one story building" Alice recalled, "Then it was raised up and a story built beneath it. It's still there and I believe the Navy uses it for something."

She often was offered rides on the lumber wagons with her father, or friends among the drivers. She remembers riding the first load of lumber into the meadow where the construction of the lower reservation of Fort MacArthur began.

She rode another first load of lumber to Robal Inn, now Green Gables, on Beacon St. When the Inn was finished, she recalled, "It was The Place to go."

The lumber wagons and teams of horses rode an early day ferry across the channel, inspiring its name, the Team Ferry. Later the Islander took its place. At other times, the lumber would be loaded on the train to cross the trestle to Long Beach.

Parker, too, traces his ancestry to the early days. His grandfather, William A. Parker crossed through the Southern Route to California in 1848. He went back to Springfield, Missouri, for his family. They returned, crossing by Donner Pass in 1852. Parker's aunt was born in a wagon in Donner Pass during a three-foot snowfall. The wagon train made it safely to Sacramento.

Parker's father wandered through California and Arizona, taking his family along with him. Elmer Parker was born in Parker Canyon, Ariz., which like other landmarks in the area bore the name of his grandfather. After moving so many times as a boy and young man, he has "stayed put" since 1913.

As he says with a grin, "We've been out a long time, but mostly around home."

Mrs. Parker remains active in community activities. She is a member of a number of groups including the Woman's Club of San Pedro and the San Pedro Community Hospital Auxiliary. Taking most of her time now is the Community sing at Anderson Memorial Hall, where she has been chairman for nine years. Another favorite group is Rudecinda Parlor, 230, Native Daughters of the Golden West, in which she is a past president. Both Parkers are members of the Thirty Year Club of which she is charter president.

Their daughters, Mrs. Gordon (Malvina) Mumford and Mrs. Helen D. Armstrong, plus two granddaughters and two grandsons, all live nearby. The grandchildren are sixth generation Californians.

Children of Elmer Parker and Alice Harriman are:

- i. Helen Dolores Parker, born 27 May 1928 in San Pedro, Los Angeles, California; died 05 Aug 2001 in San Pedro, Los Angeles, California; married Merle Dewitt Armstrong 17 Jun 1948 in San Pedro, Los Angeles, California.
- ii. Melvina Ceclia Parker, born 30 Sep 1922 in San Pedro, Los Angeles, California; died 03 Sep 2003 in Torrance, Los Angeles, California; married Gordon Clark Mumford 05 Dec 1942 in Fort MacArthur, San Pedro, California; born 05 Dec 1918 in Atlanta, Missouri; died 26 Jan 1981 in San Pedro, Los Angeles County, California.

Generation No. 3

4. William Andrew Parker, born 03 Aug 1860 in San Luis Obispo, San Luis Obispo, California; died 16 May 1946 in Nogales, Santa Cruz, Arizona. He was the son of 8. William Andrew Parker and 9. Mary Jane Tackett. He married 5. Eva Louisa Landers 16 Feb 1884 in Lochiel, Santa Cruz County, Arizona.

5. Eva Louisa Landers, born 16 Apr 1866 in Iola, Allen, Kansas; died 09 Apr 1899 in Canelo, Cochise, Arizona. She was the daughter of 10. Bartlett Landers and 11. Rebecca Butler.

The Parker Family

It was in 1849 and the cry of Gold came out of California. It echoed in the hills of Missouri and was answered by a group of young Missourians who headed toward the setting sun in search of wealth and adventure.

In the party was William Parker, a sturdy young American, who looked to the new lands in the West. The party traveled over the old Butterfield stage route, which was through Southern Arizona. The trail led down the San Pedro River in Cochise County and through the little Mexican town of Santa Cruz in Sonora. Then followed the Santa Cruz River, a pause at Tubac, then down the Gila and on to California. Near Santa Cruz the party was attacked by Indians, but fought them off.

The Huachuca Mountains were covered with tall grass and watered by many springs. They appealed to William Parker but he continued his journey to California. At the time Southern Arizona was a part of Sonora although negotiations were then underway for its purchase by the United States. Pete Kitchen had not arrived in the Santa Cruz Valley and Colonel Charles Potion had not established headquarters in Tubac.

Parker settled in San Luis Obispo, Calif. He mined for gold and farmed the rich California soil. He became the father of a number of children and the youngest was W. A. Parker. Soon California lost its appeal to the elder Parker and in 1868 he heard of the growing Territory of Arizona and moved with his family to Prescott. In 1880 when the territorial capital was changed to Phoenix he moved again, this time to the growing small town of Phoenix. That same year another move was made to the Huachuca Mountains of Southern Arizona which the elder Parker remembered when he crossed them in 1849 in the gold rush days.

His children, now grown into adult life, all went along and settled in Southern Arizona among them, W. A. Parker. Other members of the original family were James Parker, John Parker, Mrs. Elizabeth Fenter, Mrs. Nancy Bennett, and Mrs. Melvina Sorrels, all of whom have passed away.

The elder Parker died in 1890 in the canyon, which became known, and is still known, as Parker Canyon. By this time the family had increased in number and the Parker name was known far and wide in Southern Arizona. His youngest son also followed his father's life of ranching and as time grew on he became known as 'Uncle Billy' Parker. He also became the patriarch of a large family.

'Uncle Billy' died in Nogales Thursday at the ripe old age of 86 years. He had been a resident of this area for 66 years.

He was first married in 1884, to Eva Landers and the ceremony was performed at Lochiel by the late Judge Harrison, father of James A. Harrison of Nogales.

He was in this area when singing railroad workers connected the rail line which connected Arizona and Sonora at Nogales. He took part in the campaign against marauding Indians, defending his home and property on several occasions. He was almost 40 years of age when Santa Cruz County was carved out of Pima County in 1899. In that year his wife died. In 1905 he married again to Annie Musgrave.

Among his children was Lon Parker, his youngest son, who joined the Border Patrol. Lon was ambushed and slain in 1926 near Nogales and buried with honors in the American Legion cemetery here.

'Uncle Billy' will be buried tomorrow and will be laid to rest beside his son. He was the last surviving member of the original Parker family, which made history in Santa Cruz County.

Children of William Parker and Eva Landers are:

- i. Eva Pearl Parker, born 01 Mar 1885 in Parker Canyon, Santa Cruz, Arizona; died 18 Jul 1967 in Bisbee, Cochise County, Arizona; married Frank Bennett Moson 1902 in Arizona; born 18 Oct 1878 in San Jose, California; died 26 Nov 1959 in Hereford, Arizona.
- ii. James Arthur Parker, born 16 Jun 1887 in Parker Canyon, Santa Cruz, Arizona; died 18 Dec 1954 in Parker Canyon, Santa Cruz, Arizona; married Anna S. Shields; born 26 Jul 1885 in Joplin, Missouri; died 17 May 1944 in Nogales, Santa Cruz, Arizona.

LON PARKER.....April 26, 1892 - July 25, 1926

by Ed Pyeat DCPA Tuscon Sector

The United States Border Patrol was created in May, 1924. Lon Parker was the 7th Border Patrol Inspector slain in the line of duty. The first Patrol Inspectors were selected from a civil service register of prospective postal employees. Subsequent Border Patrolmen were local lawmen, cowboys, ranch hands and country boys recruited from border towns and ranches. The tough work of the young Border Patrol demanded a tough breed of man. Lon Parker fit the demand.

Born William Lonn Parker on April 26, 1892, at Parker Canyon, Arizona Territory, "Lon" was grade schooled at Parker Canyon and attended high school at Tombstone. Lon's nickname of "Skinny" followed him when he joined the U.S. Army during World War I. Parker served on the front lines with the 89th Infantry Division, 340th Field Artillery, Battery A. Lon Parker went to war in the same outfit as many other southwest youths, including future Tucson Sector Border Patrol Chief Carson Morrow.

Lon Parker took the Border Patrol examination in Los Angeles, California, and entered on duty with his last outfit on September 26, 1924. Young Parker acquitted himself as well in the Border Patrol as he had in the U.S. Army. His Chief Patrol Inspector, Walter Miller, once said of Lon Parker that he "was not afraid of the devil himself!"

"Too Late for the Fun!"

Just two weeks into his Patrol career, Lon Parker took up the trail of three suspected liquor smugglers near Wills Ranch, on the west side of the Huachuca Mountains of southern Arizona. After a short ride Parker came under steady rifle fire from the mescal runners. Lon emptied his pistol, then charged one of the smugglers, threw him to the ground and took his rifle. With the smuggler's rifle, Parker shot both the others through the "loin of the leg."

Several nearby Border Patrol officers were alerted by the sounds of the gunfire and hurried to assist. They found Lon Parker seated on a rock. Lon told them, "Sorry, but you're too late for the fun." Parker discovered the rifle he had wrested from the smuggler had been stolen from his Dad's ranch earlier that same day.

"Inspector Bill McKee Killed by Smugglers"

A liquor smuggling ring was known by Border Patrol Inspectors to be operating near the Alambre Ranch, northwest of Nogales, Arizona. On April 23, 1926, Inspectors Herbert Wood, Philip Raymond, Quince Leatherman, Billy Gates, Lon Parker and Bill McKee were lying in ambush to catch the traffickers.

As the Arizona spring day was turning to dusk, the inspectors surprised three mounted "rum runners" driving six pack horses loaded with illicit alcohol. The bootleggers deserted the pack animals and fled. The officers unloaded the pack horses and loaded the alcohol into one of the two "machines" (autos) in which they had arrived, then lit out after the smugglers. The inspectors in the loaded automobile led the pack horses, while the others drove ahead after the smugglers.

Two miles away a brief but fierce gunfight occurred. The smugglers again fled. Lon Parker and Quince Leatherman mounted two of the pack horses and followed, but were unable to overtake the better-mounted assailants. Bill McKee was found a short distance away from one of the inspectors' vehicles. He had been shot through the heart.

Two of the killers were arrested by Border Patrol Inspectors and local lawmen at the Perron Ranch, near San Javier, six days later. The third was arrested in Casa Grande that same day. Chief Patrol Inspector Walter Miller said Lon Parker's tireless investigative efforts were "largely responsible" for the identification and arrest of McKee's killers.

"July 25, 1926"

Lon Parker joined friends and family for a Sunday afternoon picnic at the McDaniel place on the north side of Korn Canyon, about seven miles southeast of Canille. On today's maps you'll have to look for "Canelo", not Canille. A nephew of Lon Parker blames the U.S. Forest Service for the "mongrelization" of the old community's name.

A rancher and tracker named John Merritt told Lon Parker at the picnic that he had seen sign of a rider or riders and a pack animal headed toward Fort Huachuca. Lon Parker left the gathering around 4:30 p.m. to head off the smuggling load. A Parker family member related that Parker asked Patrol Inspector Herbert Wood if he would ride to assist. Wood declined as he worried his wife and family would have to get themselves home to Patagonia in the face of a building summer storm. Lon Parker went alone.

When the Wills family returned to their ranch home at 6:00 p.m. from the picnic, they found Lon Parker lying mortally wounded against their wood pile. His horse and dog stood guard over their fallen partner. Parker died moments later without divulging any details of his ordeal.

Heavy summer rains on the night of July 25, 1926, challenged lawmen in their attempt to retrace Lon

Parker's trail. It was a first unknown if Parker was killed in Santa Cruz or Cochise County. Officers from both counties took part in the search and investigation. On Monday afternoon, July 26, Patrol Inspectors, county lawmen and local ranchers found a dead man a dead packhorse 2 1/2 miles from the Wills Ranch. Both were shot once only. Newspaper accounts citing Chief Inspector Miller and the Sheriffs of Cochise and Santa Cruz Counties agreed that Lon Parker had caught the liquor smuggler and was shot from ambush by a second smuggler. Lon Parker then shot and killed the liquor runner and the horse, which was carrying 20 gallons of mescal.

Pat Patterson, undersheriff of Santa Cruz County, said Parker was covered with mud on one side as he was unhorsed by the mortal wound. Chief Miller surmised from empty shells and sign found some distance from the dead man that Parker had reloaded his weapon before remounting his horse. Lon Parker's guns were loaded when he died at Wills' Ranch.

A report in a Tucson newspaper identified the dead man as a Mexican liquor smuggler named Cruz. Immigration and Naturalization Service documents identify him as Artilio Espinosa, a well known Mexican smuggler. Another news article from Tucson claimed Cochise County Sheriff J.F. McDonald put officers on lookout for Manuel Reyes, a 19 year old Mexican whom he believed to be Lon Parker's killer. McDonald said two of his deputies fired rounds at Reyes on Monday, July 26, in a canyon near where Parker was slain. Reyes escaped in a heavy rain. There is no evidence to indicate that Parker's killer was brought to justice.

"Epilogue"

Lon Parker was, by all accounts, a brave man. His courage and modest approach to life on the border were best reflected in a story told by a fellow Arizonan and, finally, in a simple entry from his daily Border Patrol work log.

Fred D'Albini was also born a southern Arizonan. He recalled a day when he was riding across Campini Mesa, on the south side of the Huachuca Mountains, with a "half-breed" Mexican boy who was working the trapping trade with him. D'Albini said he carried a .22 pistol to kill game. On this day the boy had asked to carry the gun. Fred said he thought it made the boy "feel big."

D'Albini and the youth met Lon Parker and his partner Albert Gatlin, "horseback, going the in the opposite direction." The boy jerked the gun out of his chaps pocket, pointed it directly at the two and said, "hands up!" Fred said Lon Parker and Albert Gatlin did nothing but sit their horses calmly and Parker said, "You better put that gun away before somebody gets hurt." He said the kid did so immediately, realizing he'd made a big mistake. D'Albini said it scared "hell" out of him as he knew they were Border Patrolmen and armed with pistols and rifles.

Fred D'Albini swore his great respect for Lon Parker and Albert Gatlin. He later joined the Border Patrol himself and served with distinction.

Patrol Inspectors kept a daily log of their activity, time worked and miles traveled by horseback or by "machine". Lon Parker's entry for the eventful day he mounted a pack horse and chased Bill McKee's killers simply read,

"Apr 23 - '26"

Notes for William Andrew Parker:

William PARKER was born in Tennessee in 1824, migrated to Missouri, married, and had two sons, John and James. In 1849 William traveled west with his family to San Luis Obispo County, California during the goldrush. They remained there for about 15 years while William mined for gold and farmed. About 1867 he moved his family, now six children strong, to Arizona where they eventually settled in the Huachuca Mtns. The area now bears his name - Parker Canyon. They, and many of their descendants became very prominent ranchers in Southern Arizona. William PARKER died around the turn of the century, and is buried in the canyon he so loved.

He is a cousin of Comanche Indian Chief Quanah Parker.

Children of William Parker and Mary Tackett are:

- i. John Young Parker, born 27 Dec 1844 in Springfield, Cedar, Missouri; died 1931 in Parker Canyon, Santa Cruz County, Arizona; married Angelita Arias; born 1856 in Mexico; died 09 Feb 1928 in Harshaw, Santa Cruz, Arizona.

Notes for Lewis Young Tackett:

[Tackett.ged]

Lewis Young Tackett (he signed his mark "X" over the name of Lewis L. Tackett), served with Company A, 26th Missouri Cavalry (USA) in the Civil War. His pension application was dated 1883 and filed from Worth Co., Missouri. His brother, James was a witness. His service record was under the name of Lewis L. Tackett with the certificate number being 499,540., entered as an "Invalid Pension". He filed for a pension stating; "I contacted chronic diarrhea, piles and jaundice from exposure by having been out on four days hard ride." He went on to say that he was claiming the pension because of "kidney disease and bad eyesight, which prevented him from earning his living as a farmer."

In a deed dated 2/16/1857, at Cedar Co., Mo, his name was listed as Lewis Y. Tackett and his wife as Frances C. Tackett)both signed with an "X").

In the 1880 Taylor Co., IA, Census we find 'L.Y. Tackett' and his wife, Francis, listed with their family.

In 1900, Lewis is listed in the household of his son, Sam Tackett.

Lewis and Frances had nine children.

Note-birth originally listed as 3/27/1824

37. Hannah Dehart, born Abt. 1730; died Aft. 1830 in Big Sandy District, Kanawha, West Virginia.

Notes for Christopher Tackett:

[Tackett.ged]

Chistopher served in George Poage's Company in the American Revolution. On the 27th of August 1790, the sun shone from an unclouded sky. The men were busy building a house up Coal River. John McElhaney was sick in the fort. About four o'clock that afternoon, some of the children were out on the bank of the Kanawha River playing ball and Christian Tackett was with them. Some Indians who had approached them under the cover of the river bank, showed themselves but a few yards from the boys and raised the terrible cry of their nation. Tackett and the boys fled. He reached the gate, but waited for the children to get in before he made it fast. The Indians rushed upon the gate and forced it open. He then started for the house where he had left his gun but was shot down and tomahawked in the yard, as were the children. John McElhaney hearing the cry without, closed the door, but in doing it had three of his fingers shot off. Unable to defend themselves and the Indians promising protection if they would surrender, Mrs. McElhaney prevailed with her son to open the door and admit them. There were in the Fort at that time John McElhaney, his mother, his wife, Hannah Tackett (wife of Christopher), Betsy Tackett, Mary Townsend, two boys, Samuel Tackett and Samuel McElhaney, who were taken by the Indians. When the people on Coal River heard the shooting at the Fort, Robert McElhaney and son Robert went to ascertain the cause of the confusion and finding the Fort in possession of a party of Indians started for Clendenin's at Fort Lee. The others took refuge at the house of Thomas Allsbury.

Children of Christopher Tackett and Hannah Dehart are:

- i. Stephen Tackett, died Unknown.
- ii. John Tackett, died Unknown.
- 18 iii. Samual Tackett, born 1783 in Kanawah County, Virginia; died 08 Jan 1859 in Cedar Co, Missori; married Sarah McElhaney Abt. 1813 in Kanawah County, Virginia.

- v. Betsy Jane Tackett, died Unknown.

60. Jose'F Manuel Orchaga Y Machado, born Abt. 1756 in La Villa De Sinaloa, Sinlaloa, Mexico; died 25 Feb 1810 in Pueblo De Los Angeles. He was the son of 120. Ysidoro Machado and 121. Maria Catarina

Yanez. He married 61. Maria Del Carmen De La Luz Valenzuela 28 Feb 1780 in Purisima, Concepcion, Los Alamos, Sonora, Mexico.

61. Maria Del Carmen De La Luz Valenzuela, born 1762 in El Real de Los Alamos, Sonora, Mexico; died 21 Jan 1841 in Pueblo De Los Angeles. She was the daughter of 122. Francisco Valenzuela and 123. Rita Antonia Avilas.

Notes for Jose'F Manuel Orchaga Y Machado:

[Brøderbund WFT Vol. 3, Ed. 1, Tree #5532, Date of Import: Jan 22, 2002]

Jose's full name = JOSE MANUEL MACHADO y YANEZ

Birth year is well documented for Jose and Maria, but actual date is not known.

Jose and Maria had 66 grandchildren.

Los Angeles is founded and, while the pueblo is still young, its citizens discover that the Culver City valley is good pasture ground for cattle.

Within the decade after the eleven families from Sonora and Sinaloa started building Los Angeles' first houses, the names of Machado, Higuera, Talamantes and Lopez were established in the community.

Members of these families were to become the first white settlers along Ballona Creek, the first white occupants of the valley land that stretches from Culver City to the sea.

One of the soldier-guard who came from Sonora to Los Angeles as a member of the Rivera-Moncada expedition of 1781 was 25-year-old Jose' Manuel Machado. He brought with him a 17-year-old wife, Maria. It was this Machado whose sons Augustin and Ygnacio were to settle Rancho La Ballona.

A few years after the founding of the Pueblo, Felipe Talamantes and his brother Tomas became Los Angeles citizens. Later they shared with the young Machado men in their ranch venture.

The alcalde of the pueblo in the year 1800 was Joaquin Higuera. His son, Bernardo, was to settle the land that adjoined the Rancho La Ballona on the northeast - Rancho Rincon de los Bueyes.

Meanwhile the people of the pueblo, with vague ideas about the boundaries of their own four square leagues of land, needed more good pasturage for their cattle. The Rincon and the Ballona, lying to the southwest, could qualify and in addition were so far from San Gabriel and San Fernando as to be unclaimed by the Missions.

At a very early period, then, cattle owners from the pueblo were visiting the Culver City valley.

Notes for Maria Del Carmen De La Luz Valenzuela:

Maria's full name = MARIA de la LUZ del CARMEN VALENZUELAS y AVILLAS

Maria may have been born in Spain but El Real de los Alamos, Sonora Mexico is far more likely..

Children of Jose'F Machado and Maria Valenzuela are:

- i. Jose Manuel Machado, Jr., born Oct 1781 in San Gabriel Mission; died 18 Oct 1852 in San Diego, San Diego, California; married Maria Serafina Valdez 26 Sep 1805 in Mission San Gabriel, California; born 01 Sep 1788 in Santa Barbara California; died 18 Oct 1852 in San Diego, San Diego County, California.

Jose Jr., like his father Jose Sr., served in the Spanish Military which protected the Missions and Presidios of Alta California.

Jose Jr. led a very rich life which greatly influenced San Diego History. The influence of Jose Jr. is too great to detail here. See the above references for more details.

Maria's full name was Maria Serfina Valdez y Quintero.

Don't know who Maria's parents were, but "Valdez" would have come from her father, and "Quintero" from her mother. One of the earliest settlers in San Diego was a man named Juan B. Valdez. Don't know if Maria was his daughter, but that possibility has been suggested.

Baptismal records of the Presidio and Mission of Santa Barbara, California, (now preserved in Our Lady of Sorrows Church archives Baptisms Book One, Entry No. 121: August 28, 1794, in the church of this Mission of Santa Barbara, the day old legitimate son of Jose Manuel Machado, "Soldado de Cuera", of the Company of this Royal Presidio of Santa Barbara "Originario de la Villa de Sinaloa", and of Maria del Carmen Valenzuela, his legitimate wife, natural del Real de Los Alamos".

"Godparents: Maximo Pina, "Soldado de Cuera" (Juan Maximo Pena, single and 30 in 1790) and Gertrudis Amesonita, Married 1791 with Dolores Pico (single in 1790, then age 26) "Soldado de dicho Presidio" (Jose Dolores Pico, Born ca. 1764, uncle of Governor Pio Pico)".

Confirmed by Father Laseun on May 1, 1794 at Mission Santa Barbara. Married as Orchaga on March 1, 1824 at Los Angeles (recorded at Mission San Gabriel).

No record of his marriage to Maria Ramona Sepulveda in 1827 has been found, certain pages of the Mission registers are missing during this period, but a marriage investigation dated January 29, 1827 is extant.

Died May 17, 1865 at Rancho La Ballona.

In Sister Wittenburg's biography of the Machados she uses Jose Augustin Antonio Machado y Valenzuela in some places.

Agustin's will, dated February 14, 1865, indicates that he and Maria Petra Buelna y Majias (his first wife) had another child who died before Juan Bautista was born, Maria Petra died while giving birth to their first and only son Jose Juan Bautista on June 23, 1826 at Los Angeles.

At one time Augustin owned 5 pieces of property in the Pueblo, sold a house on Main Street to Jose Chapman, owned a 2 acre tract in the vicinity of 2nd and Main Streets, Owned a 21 1/2 acre tract of land in the Pueblo adjacent to his town house on which he had 5,000 vines and 50 fruit trees under cultivation, located between 4th and 5th Streets on Main. a second vineyard was on West Washington Blvd., Site of Polytechnic High School.

Agustin had succeeded in developing a white wine which became famous throughout California, in Los Angeles an 18 gallon barrell sold for $10.00 and in northern California it sold for $25.00.

It is believed that Agustin moved from the Pueblo to the La Ballona Rancho with his family soon after 1836 census. On August 17, 1855 Agustin purchased 3 leagues (approx., 13,000 acres) of Rancho Santa Rosa in San Diego County from Juan Moreno for cash and $500.00 in stock. Rancho Santa Rosa, which contained approx., 11 leagues or 47,815.10 acres, had been granted to J Moreno on January 30 1864.

On July 21, 1858 Agustin purchased La Laguna Rancho, 1,3338 acres which adjoined Rancho Santa Rosa, from Abel Stearns for $6,000. Agustin and son Juan Bautista constructed an adobe house on it, north east corner of La Laguna (now Lake Elsinore) at Machado and Grand Avenue. The adobe house became a designated relay station on the long Butterfield Mail and Passenger line. The war between the States put and end to mail service in 1861.

Judging from tax assessments of the period 1858 both Rancho Rosa and La Laguna Rancho were regarded as on unit and were the management of his oldest son Juan Bautista.

The entire La Laguna Rancho, with the exception of about 500 acres was sold in 1873 to Charles A Sumner for $29,000 in gold. Bautista held on to the remaining acreage until 1883 to subdividers from the midwest.

In 1875 La Ballona was partitioned by Augustin's heirs. Ramon Machado received 2,090 acres and her children received Approx ? acres apiece. (Pieces of this document are missing)

In 1876, Agustin's heirs, sold their portion of the Rancho Santa Rosa (Approx., 13,000 acres) for $43,270

Notes for Jr. Lewis Tackett:

[Tackett.ged]

On August 1, 1793 Lewis Tackett and his son-in-law, John Young, bought the first two lots sold in the City of Charleston.

[Tackett.ged]

Lewis served with his brother Christopher in the American Revolution. He and his brother Christopher came with their families to the Kanawha Valley in 1783 and built what was to become known as Fort Tackett al little below the mouth of Coal River. It was a double log Cabin, enclosed by a strong stockade, which was ordinarily sufficient protection from the Indians. John Young and Lewis Tackett represented the people who lived at the mouth of Coal River in the organization of Kanawha County on October 6, 1789.

Children of Lewis Tackett and Mary are:

- 36 i. Christopher Tackett, born Abt. 1730; died 17 Aug 1790 in Big Sandy District, Kanawha, West Virginia; married Hannah Dehart 26 Feb 1782 in Botetourt County, Virginia.

121. Maria Catarina Yanez, born Abt. 1735 in Vds, Sinaloa, , Mexico; died Bet. 1760 - 1824.

Notes for Ysidoro Machado:

Ysidro and Maria arrived in Los Angeles in 1781 or 1782, as a part of the second expedition to found the Mission at Santa Barbara. Ysidro served at the Presidio's in Southern California as protection for the Spanish Missionaries and settlers. The family eventually settled in Los Angeles where they aquired land grants for Rancho La Ballona, Rancho Centinella and properties in Lake Elsinore and Temecula.

Notes for Maria Catarina Yanez:

Notes for Sr. Lewis Tacquett:
[Tackett.ged]

The Immigrant Ancestor of most with the Tackett surname in the U.S. are descendents of the French Huguenot (Protestant) Lewis Tacquett. Lewis was born in France, moved to England as a youngster and shortly after 1686 migrated to the Colony of Virginia. By 1711 he had settled on a small land grant on Cedar Run in present Prince William County, VA (then Stafford Co) along with another French Huguenot Lewis Reno.

Lewis Tacquett (ca 1675 - ca 1744) was born about 1675 to a Huguenot (Protestant) family in France. His immigration to America was a direct result of religious persecution in France. The Edict of Nantes, a decree of King Henry IV in 1598, ended a series of religious wars between Catholics and Protestants that began in 1562. The Edict provided some measure of religious freedom to the Huguenots but its provisions were never fully implemented. Persecution of Protestants continued especially after 1681. Then, in 1685 the Edict was revoked by Louis XIV and hundreds of thousands of Huguenots were forced to flee France and take refuge in Protestant Countries. That the family of Louis Tacquett fled to England is shown by his name being found on a 1686-87 list of Huguenots for whom passage to Virginia was paid by an Englishman, Nicholas Hayward. Also included on this list was Louis Reynaud (Reno) who came to Virginia at the same time and whose family was very close to the Tacketts there.

Notes for Mary Sarah Spiller:
[Tackett.ged]

On the 27th of March 1790 Mary Tackett and son, Lewis Jr., being in a field some distance from the Fort were seized and carried off by a party of Indians. Pursuit was made but with no success. They were carried to Huron, in Michigan, where Mary was purchased from her captor by a squaw who had known her when a girl, and sent to Detroit and set at liberty. Lewis Tackett and Charles Young left Tackett's Fort on 26th of August and descended the Kanawha River to Point Pleasant to bring them home.
